A red herring is something that misleads or distracts from a relevant or important issue. It may be either a logical fallacy or a literary device that leads readers or audiences towards a false conclusion. A red herring might be intentionally used, such as in mystery fiction or as part of rhetorical strategies (e.g., in politics), or it could be inadvertently used during argumentation.

The ideal reader response to a red herring is "Wow, I totally fell for it!" Once the reader falls for a red herring, they will be more inclined to mistrust their own instincts, and will find it harder to make up their minds about what's truly going on in the story. This is very effective for creating and sustaining tension. IV.
