"Online" and "offline" are terms used in telecommunications. If a computer or a user is connected to the Internet, it is said to be "online". A website, for example, is online, because it is on the Internet.. If something is not online, it is said to be "offline". If a system is offline, it is in a disconnected state.

A NOT gate (also often called Inverter) is a logic gate.Each NOT gate has only one input signal. Logically with NOT gates, the input and the output swap, so if you input 1 it outputs as 0; likewise if you input 0 it outputs as 1.. In the 20th century an inverter was often made of a discrete transistor with other components, or several inverters were packaged in an integrated circuit.
